

EMORY
UNIVERSITY

CEPEX

CENTER FOR PROFESSIONAL EXCHANGE

Emory University and
The Center for Professional Exchange
Present:

Japan, Moving Toward a More Advanced Knowledge Economy, and the Future of Cross-Pacific Cooperation

Monday, October 1st, 2007

3:00 pm- 4:30 pm

Coffee and registration at 2:45pm

Reception following event

Whitehall 207
Emory University

Why Study Japan Now?

Japan's economic development in the 90's was labeled "a lost decade." Its neighbor is the growing giant China. In fact, those circumstances only emphasize the importance of U.S.-Japan economic, political, and cultural relations.

Introductory Remarks:

Santa J. Ono

Vice Provost for Academic Initiatives
& Deputy to the Provost, Emory University

Professor Mark Ravina,

Director, East Asian Studies Program, Emory University

Speaker:

Tsutomu Shibata

Senior Adviser, World Bank Institute

Commentator:

Tom Oku

Chief Representative in Washington DC
Bank of Tokyo-Mitsubishi UFJ

Moderator:

Yukio Tada

Chairman, Center for Professional Exchange

For more information please contact: Justin Manger (202) 429-8680, manger@sunrockinstitute.org

Supported by the Japan Foundation Center for Global Partnership and the Nissho Iwai Foundation, in collaboration with the World Bank Institute and the Office of the Provost at Emory University